DECISION MAKING

There are several options for legal decision making when a person is no longer able to make safe decisions with understanding. For more information on any of these options, or to request copies of forms, reach out to the ADRC of Buffalo and Pepin Counties at 866-578-2372.

Release of Information (ROI): ROI's allow health care providers to share health care information about you with people you would like involved in your treatment plans or medical decisions. ROI's do not change decision making capacity but allow for sharing of information. ROI's are provided by your medical provider and are typically in effect for one year but can be canceled at any time.

Supported Decision Making (SDM): A SDM agreement is a way for people with disabilities to get help from trusted family members, friends and professionals, to help them understand the situations and choices they face so they are able to make their own decisions. SDM does not require a court action and you are able to make changes to your agreement as you choose.

Power of Attorney (POA): Completing a Power of Attorney for Health Care or a Power of Attorney for Finance allows you to establish a decision maker for yourself in the event you are unable to act on your behalf. Having completed POA documents may allow your family to help you with legal decision making without the need to involve the legal system. For more information or a copy of these documents, please call your local ADRC.

- Power of Attorney for Health Care (POA-HC): This legal document allows you to establish your wishes in relation to health and medical situations including situations in which you would or would not want lifesaving procedures to be implemented. Your agent does not act on their wishes but is responsible for ensuring your wishes as set out in your POA-HC document are followed. Your agent does not take on this responsibility until two doctors or a doctor and a psychiatrist have both assessed you and determine you are no longer able to understand the implications of your health care decisions (called a statement of incapacity). This process is called activation and once a POA-HC has been activated, the agent can then assume a decision-making role with your health care decisions.
- Power of Attorney for Finance (POA-F): Is a legal document allowing you to establish an agent to handle financial related decisions based on the specific permissions you outline in your document. A POA-F can begin making financial decisions on your behalf at the time of signing or upon a future event or occurrence as identified by you in the document. By completing a POA-F, you are not giving up any of your decision making rights in regards to your finances, instead you are giving your agent authority to handle these decisions as well.

Conservatorship: Conservatorship is a voluntary process in which you ask for approval from the court to have another person legally manage your finances. A judge either approves or denies the person's suitability to manage your finances. The judge cannot assign anyone you have not nominated to be your conservator.

Guardianship: Guardian of Person or Guardian of Estate are court actions that remove a person's legal decision-making powers and transfers those powers to another person or a corporate guardian. Guardianship requires the courts find a person to be incompetent and therefore unable to make safe decisions. A person can have a guardian managing both their life decisions and finances or one or the other.
